

MRS. BOCHAT

Lydia is a quiet presence at Oberle with a big impact. She does so much for both students and teachers in facilitating behavior plans, being a support system for students and staff, and leading professional development through CPI and Renaissance training. Many teachers seek out Lydia for her advice on how to navigate student issues and behaviors as well as positive reinforcements and ideas with how to better support student behaviors.

Lydia is responsible for all students' behavior plans as well as developing new incentive plans to better support them. She is always there when a student is struggling, and she is a go to for adults for many of our students experiencing various issues. One of my students regularly seeks Lydia out as a support system. This student has often asked to go for a walk with Lydia and feels comfortable using Lydia as a sounding board and for advice.

Lydia is consistently the one support staff who will ask the teachers if they need a break during lunch.

It is evident Lydia genuinely cares for our students and promotes their success through her interactions, the behavior plans, and her positive and compassionate approach to helping them.
